

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my gratitude towards a few of all those from whom I have benefited during the writing of this book. First of all, I would like to thank Professor Simo Knuuttila. He was the supervisor of my doctoral dissertation and his careful reading, correcting and commenting of my writings has pushed my thinking on medieval logic far beyond what would have been possible otherwise. Professor Gino Roncaglia also deserves a warm thanks. He was the faculty examiner of my thesis and his comments and suggestions for corrections helped me improve the book. I would also like to thank the researchers and administrative staff at the Department of Systematic Theology at Helsinki University for their kind reception and warm welcome during the two semesters I spent in Helsinki. I especially would like to thank Mikko Yrjönsuuri. I have learned a great deal from our discussions about philosophy, and particularly about medieval logic.

I would, furthermore, like to express my gratitude towards Thorild Dahlquist and Rysiek Sliwinski. They are the two people in Uppsala who have shown the most interest in my work. I am indebted to both of them for their comments on, and corrections of, my thoughts on modal logic. I have also benefited greatly from discussions about medieval philosophy and medieval modal logic in particular with Professor Sten Ebbesen, Professor Calvin Normore and Professor Christopher Martin. I especially would like to thank the staff at the Institute for Greek and Latin Medieval Philology at Copenhagen University for their kind assistance during my visit there.

Finally, my deepest gratitude to my family and particularly to Magdalena Lagerlund for her support. I dedicate this book to her.
