

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Books rarely get into circulation without the assistance and dedication of those whose diligent work “offstage” makes it possible to bring the book’s ideas into circulation. This anthology is no exception. We would like to thank the members of Concerned Philosophers for Peace, whose annual conferences have created space for rich interdisciplinary dialogues on issues of peace, community, and nonviolence. We would also like to thank those colleagues who provided both editorial assistance as well as helpful suggestions during the process of blind review. Special thanks go to Joseph C. Kunkel, editor of the Philosophy of Peace special series, for coordinating the series and serving as a liaison between the editors and the Value Inquiry Book Series of Rodopi. We also thank Robert Ginsberg for his editorial guidance and encouragement during this process.

Special thanks go to Linda Weiner Morris and Pam Luttmers of educational publishing resources. Their intelligent attention to detail, knowledge of the typesetting process, and moral support during this process have enhanced the quality of our collective efforts.

Financial assistance for the production of this book was provided by the University of Southern Mississippi. Special thanks for this financial assistance go to: the Office of Research and Planning and Karen Yarbrough who, as Vice President at the time, granted financial support for this project; to Glenn Terry Harper, Dean of Liberal Arts, whose support for Paula J. Smithka’s various projects has been constant; to Forrest Wood, Jr., Chair of the Department of Philosophy and Religion, who has offered emotional support and encouragement in addition to monies from his own research account; and to Lauriston King, of the Office of Research Sponsored Programs, who offered his suggestions for composing the project proposal.

Thanks also go to colleagues of the Department of Philosophy and Religion at the University of Southern Mississippi for their support and encouragement.

A final thank you to the contributors to this book, without whom this project would not have been possible.

Alison Bailey
Illinois State University

Paula J. Smithka
The University of Southern Mississippi