

acknowledgements

I want to especially thank the following friends and colleagues for their encouragement, assistance, careful readings and critical suggestions: Eugene Gendlin, Véronique Fóti, Elliot Levine, Alan Milchman, Jesse Nash, James O'Meara, Alan Rosenberg, and Robert Scharff.

The moral and financial support of the Holocaust Educational Foundation and its President, Theodore Weiss, have been invaluable. My association with them is one of those wonderful connections that take us beyond the Auschwitz legacy.

And my wonderful students of “Auschwitz and After”—they do not know how important they are in the formation and articulation of their teachers' thoughts.

Mary Marocco, Theresa Mysing, and Elizabeth Nguyen are very patient and understanding “models.”

Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Radasky have testified before my “Auschwitz and After” class for the last eight years and given so very generously of their time and special knowledge to my students. They have made my feeble pedagogic attempts at teaching the Holocaust into something closer to a dialogue with the most pressing issue of this century. This is my second-hand response to what both of you bear with so much courage and dignity.

The Way of Insight

Two Faces of Realism