This sixth meeting organised by UNITAR, IPS and JIIA brought together a group of excellent participants, each closely involved with the task of rebuilding East Timor. We were impressed by their frank appraisal of the achievements and shortcomings of UNTAET. Without this objectivity and openness, the meeting would not have been possible, and so it is to them that we owe our deepest gratitude.

We would like to thank our colleagues in the United Nations system and UNTAET who provided us with much counsel and support in the preparation of this meeting. In particular, we are grateful to Mr. Sergio Vieira de Mello, the former Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Transitional Administrator of UNTAET for his guidance and hospitality when we visited East Timor on a study mission. His honest and no-nonsense approach to the job at hand continues to be an inspiring model.

We take this opportunity too to thank the people in East Timor who met us during our study mission, in particular Secretary of State for National Defence Roque Rodrigues, Lieutenant Anthony Miles of the Training Unit in the UN Peacekeeping Force, Michael Francino, Jonathan Prentice and Hiroko Miyamura.

The Governments of Japan and Singapore have been steadfast allies in their funding for the conference series, and this publication. We are grateful for their support and for the unwavering assistance from their representatives.

This was the first time in the life of this conference series that the meeting was convened in Tokyo. With the tremendous support from our colleagues at the Japan Institute of International Affairs (JIIA) and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA) the meeting was impeccably organized and constructed. The team in JIIA was ably led by Mr. Tetsuya Yamada, Ms. Keiko Koyanagi, and Mr. Masahiro Omura.

We have a debt of gratitude to Mr. Takahisa Kawakami, Director of the International Peace Cooperation Division, and Mr. Atsushi Kuriyama of MOFA for their strong support and commitment to the conference series.

Constant assistance was also received from our colleagues at the United Nations Institute of Training and Research (UNITAR) and the Institute of Policy Studies (IPS). Matt Fuller, who so painstakingly and with great attention to detail worked on the manuscript for months, deserves our praise and particular mention. Ms. Hiroko Nakayama at UNITAR, and Ms. Irene Lim and Ms. Wu Su Pei at IPS were the best of colleagues.

Our sincere thanks to our many advisers and helpers, some of whom shall remain anonymous, for their generosity in time and counsel.

We are again indebted to our Co-chairs for their leadership, and for giving us the opportunity to be part of this series. It has been a great privilege to work with them again.

We dedicate this book to the people and friends of East Timor. May their example inspire other peoples around the world in their quest for liberation from tyranny.
