

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I thank the friends and colleagues to whom I am indebted for encouraging and supporting my ICL aspirations. In particular I am indebted to all my colleagues at the Criminal Law Faculty of Utrecht University (the Netherlands), which was one of the few Universities to develop specialized programmes and courses on the law of ICT.

I also owe gratitude to my international criminal law mentors, M. Cherif Bassiouni, William A. Schabas, and Sharon A. Williams. My colleagues at Knoops and Partners Lawyers in Amsterdam deserve thanks for their patience. As always, Ms Frederique Wessel performed a masterly task in preparing the text at its various stages. All at Transnational Publishers, especially Heike Fenton, merit gratitude for giving me their trust again. Of course, Terence Hegarty for his very thorough editing work.

Finally, I owe gratitude to my legal partner and wife Carry, whose inspiration is of indispensable value to my work and to my son, Joel, for his typographical assistance.
