

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In accordance with tradition at Leyden University, many of the debts I owe must remain implicit. These are the debts to the many teachers and colleagues who have assisted me in various ways during the writing of this work. One, Martina Noteboom, I may mention by name, especially since it was her practical expertise and considerable support in the preparation of the manuscript which brought this book to its final form. I owe a special word of thanks to one of the editors of the Costerus Series, Cedric Barfoot, for the time and energy he spent on the manuscript in its last stages.

There are others whom I wish to thank by name for their contribution: Jane Mallinson, Brigitte Ottenhoff, Marjolijn Pouw, Frank Schröder, Ivo van der Velden, Herman Verhaar, Elly Versluis, Janos Urai. I am particularly indebted to Arie Speksnijder. My gratitude to the late Seymour Betsky is immense, for his care and judgement from the very beginning till his own last days. What I owe my parents in terms of their close interest and concern from so far away is immeasurable.

Ironically, the debts which one acknowledges last should be one's first because they are one's greatest. Albert and Engelbert Gieskes have made this book possible.
