

Acknowledgments

This volume contains fifteen essays written by friends, colleagues and former colleagues of Jan Bakker, Professor of American Literature at the University of Groningen, The Netherlands, on the occasion of his retirement.

The editor wishes to thank the authors for responding to his call for papers and for their ready response to his editorial promptings.

A special word of thanks is due to Professor A.A. MacDonald, who was very helpful at various stages of the project. In particular I would like to acknowledge his assistance in commissioning some of the essays appearing in this book.

I am grateful to C.C. Barfoot, John G. Cawelti, Theo D'haen, Duco van Oostrum, and Allan Wilcox for their editorial assistance and encouragement. I would also like to thank C.J.M. Zuidgeest-Verhoeven for her patience while we prepared the manuscript for the press.

Grateful acknowledgment is made to Professor Leslie A. Fiedler for permission to reprint material that originally appeared in What Was Literature?
