

Preface

It is a great pleasure to thank Johannes de Moor for his unyielding support and contagious enthusiasm in introducing me into the fascinating world of biblical and semitic studies. I also wish to thank my Spanish teachers, Prof. Dr. L. Díez Merino and Prof. Dr. J. Ribera Florit of the Universitat de Barcelona for their numerous illuminating comments.

I likewise wish to thank Prof. Dr. W. Baars, Dr. J. Targarona Borrás, Prof. Dr. L. Dequeker, Prof. Dr. N. Fernández Marcos, Prof. Dr. E. Noort, and Prof. Dr. R.P. Gordon for helping and advising me in various, but invariably beneficent ways.

I am grateful to Prof. Dr. C. Houtman for his direction of the research programme in which I have had the privilege to participate. I am also most grateful to the Theologische Universiteit van de Gereformeerde Kerken in Nederland who granted me a research post during the last four and a half years. The publication of this study has partly been made possible by financial support of the Stichting het Scholten-Cordes Fonds in The Hague.

I am furthermore highly obliged by the librarians of the following institutions, namely, Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (M. Garel), Cambridge Genizah Collections, Cambridge (S. Reif), British Library, London (I. Tahan), Bodleian Library, Oxford (R. Judd), Chester Beatty Library, Dublin (M. Ryan), Edinburgh University Library, Edinburgh (J.V. Howard), the Universiteitsbibliotheek Leiden (J.J. Witkam), Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Preußischer Kulturbesitz (H.-O. Feistel), Thüringer Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, Jena (I. Kratzsch), Kaufmann Collection Budapest (I. Ormos), Uniwersytet Wrocławski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka (A. Lodomirski), Universidad de Salamanca, Salamanca (M. Becedas González), Biblioteca Nacional, Madrid (M. Carrión Gútiéz), Biblioteca Universitaria, Bologna (Piccarda Quilici), Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana (L.E. Boyle), Badische Landesbibliothek, Karlsruhe (Buchta), Stadtbibliothek, Nürnberg (R. Toutouly), The Library of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, New York (M. Rabinowitz, S. Jerchow), Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, Cincinnati (A. Rudavsky), Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt, Halle (W. Starke), Bibliotheek van de Theologische Universiteit Kampen (D.M. Klunder-Roepers), and above all The Jewish National and University Library—the Institute of Microfilmed Hebrew Manuscripts (B. Richler).

I am greatly indebted to Dr. L. McFall for making numerous suggestions in order to purge my English of the worst.

Thanks are also due to H.M. van den Bosch and to my colleagues in the department of Semitic Studies at the Theological University of Kampen who contributed to the present work in various ways, namely, R. de Hoop, M. Oldenhof, P. Sanders, F. Sepmeijer, and A.J.P.W van der Wal. I also thank G. Klompmaker, H. Offringa and J. Spoelstra for assisting me in tidying up the bibliographical references and making the indexes.

Notwithstanding these acknowledgements, I bear full responsibility for the contents of this study, including errors that remain.

Finally, I thank the person who recognised earlier than I did that I would enjoy working on this project. Because she stimulated me in writing this thesis ever since, I dedicate this book to her—Liv.
