

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work would not have been possible without summer seminar grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities to study at Indiana University, Stanford University, The University of Florida, The University of California at Berkeley, and The Ohio State University. I owe a debt of gratitude to the seminar leaders who introduced me to literary criticism and theory: James Ackerman, Kenneth R. R. Gros Louis, Herbert Lindenberger, Giles Gunn, Calum Carmichael, David Daube, and James Phelan. I am also grateful to Alan Culpepper and David Orton for accepting the manuscript into Brill's "Biblical Interpretation Series".

I wish to express appreciation to the students in my Revelation courses at Winebrenner Theological Seminary who encouraged me in numerous ways, not the least by their insightful comments. I am also grateful to Zoar Lutheran Church, Perrysburg, Ohio for inviting me as Theologian-in-Residence in fall 1996 and listening to my views as they were being developed. I owe special thanks to Matt DeJongh and John Dasher, who painstakingly read the manuscript and offered valuable advice and encouragement.

Finally, I am grateful to my wife, Dianne, and my children, Timothy, Carin and Jay, who put up with this project longer than they should have. I dedicate the book in memory of my father who eagerly looked forward to its publication.
