

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This study represents a revised and edited version of material initially presented as a doctoral thesis to the Department of Art History at Bryn Mawr College. It represents the fruits my labors as a doctoral student, but reflects as well the efforts of several people who have shared critical ideas and given of their precious time. I would like to express my gratitude to the following institutions and people who contributed to my tenure as a graduate student and thereby shared in this work:

*The faculty of the History of Art Department of Bryn Mawr College, with very special thanks to my thesis advisor, Dr. James Snyder, who provided unflagging support for me and my work.

*The staff of the Bryn Mawr College Art Library, Canaday Library and the Visual Resources Department. Bryn Mawr College and the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences for their continued faith and financial support.

*Mrs. Gertrude Reichenbach, former professor of Netherlandish Studies at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

*The U.S. Institute of International Education, for the award of a Fulbright Research Grant, and the welcoming staff of the Netherlands America Commission for Educational Exchange in Amsterdam.

*The Whiting Foundation for funding the final year of my work for the dissertation.

I would also like to thank the following people who opened their doors to me while I was in The Netherlands: Dr. Pieter Biesboer, Conservator of the Frans Halsmuseum in Haarlem; Dr. Pieter van Thiel, Curator of European Painting at the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam; Jan Piet Filedt Kok, Director of Collections at the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam; Michiel Kersten, formerly Assistant Curator of Prints and Drawings at the Teylers Museum in Haarlem; Dr. Robin Adèr, Curator of Prints at the Museum Boymans-van Beuningen in Rotterdam; the staff at the Rijksbureau voor Kunsthistorische Documentatie in The Hague, especially Drs. Christina J.A. Wansink; and the staff of the Royal Library in The Hague and the Amsterdam University Library.

Most importantly, the present book would not have been possible without the critical support of Dr. James Tanis, Professor of Religion and History, Bryn Mawr College, who supervised the dissertation as well as the transition to its present form. It is difficult to imbue a lengthy scholarly work with gracefulness. If I have succeeded in this at all it is through the help of James Tanis. Dr. Tanis also provided essential help with the Dutch translations. The Latin translations are the work of my husband, Matthew Kenney, who also undertook the often thankless task of reading all my first drafts and finessing the intricacies of formats, fonts and the laser printer. It goes without saying that he is the last but not least to be thanked.

Lastly, I am indebted to Bob de Graaf of De Graaf Publishers for undertaking the publishing of this work and to James Tanis for initiating the idea. It is to the latter, James Tanis, that I dedicate this book.
