

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In accordance with the Copyright Act, 1956, I make formal acknowledgement to those publishers from whose copyright works I have made extracts "for purposes of criticism". On every occasion that such extracts are used, the title of the book, date of publication, and page references are quoted. The first of those to whom I am indebted for such extracts is Constable and Company Limited, London, the publishers of The Works of Bernard Shaw (1930-), as well as the many separate issues of his works. In addition to the foregoing are others issued by Constable and Company, Limited, London, viz. Ellen Terry and Bernard Shaw: A Correspondence (1931), also by Putnam U.S.A.; Bernard Shaw's Brethren: With a Commentary by Bernard Shaw (1938) by C. Macmahon Shaw; Bernard Shaw: His Life and Personality (1942) by Hesketh Pearson; and Bernard Shaw: His Life, Work and Friends (1956) by St John Ervine. Acknowledgement has to be made to Victor Gollancz Ltd., London, for excerpts from Bernard Shaw and Mrs Patrick Campbell: Their Correspondence (1952) Edited by Alan Dent, and for Thirty Years with G. B. S. (1931) by Blanche Patch. I am likewise indebted to Longmans, Green and Co., London, for quotations from Our Partnership (1948) by Beatrice Webb. Hutchinson & Co., London, are to be mentioned for extracts from G. B. S. Ninety: Aspects of Bernard Shaw's Life and Work (1946), as well as from Jesting Apostle: The Life of Bernard Shaw (1956) by Stephen Winston, whilst another book by the latter, Days with Bernard Shaw (1949, Vanguard Press), has also been used. I have also placed under contribution My Life and Some Letters (1922) by Mrs Patrick Campbell, issued by Hutchinson, London (A. Knopf, U.S.A.). To the Leagrave Press, Luton, I have to make acknowledgement for the use of Bernard Shaw: A Chronicle (1951) by R. F. Rattray: whilst a like obligation must be proffered to Blackwell, Oxford, for a citation from William Morris (1936) by May Morris.
