

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As the outcome of a doctoral dissertation defended at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva in February 1986, this book owes much to all those at the Institute who encouraged my efforts. In particular, I am deeply indebted to my thesis director, the late Professor Michel Virally, whose philosophy and approach to international law have greatly marked my own outlook. I would like to express my great appreciation and thanks to Professor Georges Abi-Saab for providing me with constant support, ideas and comments on my work. I would also like to extend my sincere thanks to Professor Philippe Cahier who read and commented on the earlier version and to Professor Lucius Caflisch, Director, for all his encouragement. Finally, a special word of thanks is due to Professor Philippe Brillard for his unfailing support.

This book, however, would never have been completed without the backing and tolerance of my family. All my thanks to my husband Neil, for his incredible patience and encouragement. Without my mother's unquestioning support and assistance I would have found this a far more difficult task. To my children, Alix and Geoffrey, I can only say that without your loving presence this book would have been written a long time ago, but I would not have had it otherwise! I would also like to thank my mother-in-law, Eleanor Gowlland, who was of immense help in checking some of the references.

Finally, this book is a minute offering to my sister Micheline, to whom I owe so much and to whom I can only quote: "the spider spins again."
