The present study has been submitted as a Habilitationsschrift in international law to the University of Zürich (Switzerland). In first place, my most sincere thanks go to Professor Dr. D. Schindler of the University of Zürich for the interest shown in, and support given to, this study throughout its preparation. I am also much obliged to Professor Dr. W. Kägi who encouraged me to undertake the project. The latter would not have been possible without a scholarship from the Kommission zur Förderung des akademischen Nachwuchses of the University of Zürich. Here, I would like to express my gratitude to the then President, later Rector of the University of Zürich, Professor Dr. V. Meyer, for her interest in my work, and to Mrs. A. Clerc of the Secretariat of the Kommission. I hasten to acknowledge the scholarship of the Forschungskommission of the University of Zürich (Schweizerischer Nationalfonds) which enabled me to continue, and complete, my study.

This research project was undertaken and written during a period of time spent at the University of Cambridge (UK) where I was a member of the Law Faculty, and a Bye Fellow at Robinson College. I am greatly indebted to Mr. E. Lauterpacht, QC, Reader in international law in the University, who assisted me, in many ways, in the organization of my stay, and in arranging my status in Cambridge; his critical discussion of my method and approach proved to be both very helpful and stimulating. The assistance of Professor D. Bowett, Whewell Professor of international law in the University, who commented on parts of my work, and on its general outline, was greatly appreciated. Professor B. Cheng, University College London, discussed with me single issues of this book. I acknowledge the observations of the late Professor C. Parry on general questions of my research. My thanks also go to Judge Sir Robert Jennings, and Professor I. Brownlie, Chichele Professor of public international law in the University of Oxford, for their interest in my work.

Professor S.E. Nahlik of the University of Krakow (Poland), and His Excellency Mr. Senjin Tsuruoka, formerly Representative of Japan at the Sixth Committee of the UN General Assembly, both kindly sent me publications appertaining to my subject. Mrs. E. Corrigan of the UN Publications Department supplied me with the most recent UN publications. The assistance of the staffs of the Squire Law Library (Cambridge), the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies (London), the Peace Palace Library (The Hague), and the Institut für Völkerrecht und ausländisches Verfassungsrecht (Zürich), respectively, facilitated the compilation of the vast body of materials and writings on the topic in general. Mr. W. DeSocio, JD LLM (Cantab.), of the New York Bar, corrected the grammar and style of various drafts, and Mr. J. Stoodley, LLM (Cantab.), commented upon substantial issues of my work. Miss M. Lamb, BA (Cantab.), carefully checked the preparation, and the writing, of the final draft, and Mrs. A.L. Mills patiently and efficiently word-processed the study.

My sincere thanks go to the Warden of Robinson College, Sir Jack Lewis, Sc.D., FRS, and the Fellows for a memorable stay at Cambridge. I would also like to thank my mother, Mrs. E. Villiger, for her constant support, and for having read and commented upon various parts of the book. Last, but not least, my thanks go to my family, the day-to-day companions of this work — namely to my wife, Bernadette, without whose encouragement and assistance this book would never have come about.

While I am indebted to these and many other teachers, colleagues, friends and students, the responsibility for any errors or omissions in the text remains, of course, entirely my own.

Cambridge,
September 1983.
