

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The conception and ideas for this book were initially developed during a month as a resident scholar at the Rockefeller Foundation Center in Bellagio, Italy. The author gratefully acknowledges that opportunity. As already noted, the Hague Academy of International Law is owed particular thanks for its invitation to give the General Course in International Law. Columbia Law School provided research funds and valuable library help for which I am grateful. The coincidence of my work on this book and the preparation of the revised Restatement of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States (in connection with which I was an adviser) proved most helpful. I thank the Rapporteur, Professor Louis Henkin, the associate rapporteurs and other advisers for stimulating discussions.

I was also assisted in the final stages of this work by Ayesha Dias, LL.M., Columbia Law School. Her diligent assistance in the revision of chapters VII and VIII is greatly appreciated.
