

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is with great pleasure that I express my thanks in the first place to Dr. J. Ensink who, as Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Groningen, was willing to become one of my promotor in Amsterdam, and who gave me excellent guidance during my stay in the Netherlands; to Professor Dr. A. Scharpé, my teacher since my first year as a student at the University of Amsterdam, without whose kind assistance I should never have been able to prolong my stay in the Netherlands as I needed; and to Professor Dr. K. de Vreese for his kindness in becoming a referee for this dissertation, in which capacity he gave me much of his time and provided me with valuable criticism and advice.

A dissertation is sometimes considered to represent the conclusion of one's academic studies, and therefore I have pleasure in offering sincere thanks to those professors who were my teachers in my student days: Dr. A. J. Reichling, Dr. Th. P. Galetin, Dr. C. C. Berg, Dr. G. F. Pijper and the late Dr. W. E. J. Kuiper.

But in these days of international cooperation and foreign aid a citizen of the developing countries seriously engaged in scientific research may at one stage or other of his investigation need to consider aid from various quarters. I thus find myself in the position of being able to thank persons and institutions of three countries, who in the intellectual or material sense have been of great help in my work. The geographical location of these persons and institutions happens to coincide with the progress of my research, and I shall therefore name them according to the countries I was in at the time.

Starting in Indonesia, I should like to thank the University of Udayana, Denpasar, with Professor Dr. Ida Bagus Made Mantra as Rector at the time, and Mr. I Gusti Ngurah Bagus as Dean of the Faculty of Letters, for providing me with, and allowing me to use, the text of the Jñānasiddhānta for this thesis; Dr. and Mrs. Murdowo who were my host and hostess during my longest stay in Denpasar in 1967; the Faculty of Letters of the University of Indonesia, Djakarta, with the successive Deans, Professor Dr. Slametmuljana and Dr. Harsja Bachtiar, but for whose great tolerance in allowing me nearly two sabbatical years I could not have finished my work; the Embassy of the Netherlands in Djakarta, especially Mr. Frank Boreel, on whose advice the Ministry of Culture, Recreation and Social Work of the Netherlands allowed me a scholarship to finish my studies in their country and to whom I offer my sincere thanks. I am glad to express my thanks further to Mr. K. M. Kannampily, Ambassador of India in Djakarta, and my friends and colleagues at the University of Indonesia, Professor G. J. Resink, Mr. E. K. M. Masinambow and Mr. Machfudi Mangkudilaga, who kindly provided me with books and journals from their personal libraries and took a keen interest in the progress of my studies.

In England, I should like to express my thanks to the British Council who enabled me to visit London and to meet Professor J. C. Wright, Dr. V. Kunst and Dr. C. Hooykaas of the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, whom I also thank for giving me valuable advice, Dr. Hooykaas for generously putting material from his private collection and research at my disposal.

In the Netherlands my gratitude is expressed with the greatest pleasure to the Royal Institute of Linguistics and Anthropology, and especially Professor Dr. A. Teeuw, for their generosity in taking care of the publication of my manuscript. I should like to thank also Professor Dr. P. J. Zoetmulder S.J., who kindly gave me full access to his wealth of lexicographical material and the texts in his possession, and whose advice I have taken full advantage of. My thanks are further due to the Libraries of the University of Leiden, the Kern Institute, and the Royal Institute of Linguistics and Anthropology, and especially to Mrs. E. M. L. Andriessen of the Leiden University Library. I also thank Mr. Stuart Robson of the Royal Institute of Linguistics and Anthropology, who advised on questions of English expression, and Mrs. C. A. Borghouts of the same Institute, who converted my clumsy sketches into professional drawings. I must express my gratitude to Mr. W. J. Nijgh and staff of Smits printing house for their patience and understanding. Finally I should like to thank my dear friend, Mrs. Dots Dommering, whose kind hospitality enabled me to study in peace for nearly two years.
