

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To all those whose aid and encouragement contributed to the completion of this study I wish to express my sincere gratitude. Special thanks go to Dörte Nicolaisen and Tineke Ritmeester for their gifts of translation, as well as to Ken Nabors, Sylvia Toombs, and the Interlibrary Loan Staff at Washington University for their expert assistance. To Hanser Verlag, the Theater der Stadt Heidelberg, and their representatives -- Ursula Ruppel and Anne Sorg-Schumacher -- I extend particular thanks. Without their kind cooperation my research would have been less than complete.

I owe thanks to Washington University for the financial assistance that made this study possible and to the College of Humanities at The Ohio State University for the assistance needed to bring the manuscript to publication. For their careful readings and guidance I would like to thank Paul Michael Lützel, Patricia Hemminghouse, and Egon Schwarz; for their collegial generosity I am grateful to Peter Uwe Hohendahl, Helmut Kreuzer, and David Roberts. Jörg Drews merits special mention for his critical insights, keen wit, and invaluable friendship.

To my family and the good friends who have weathered my stormy seas I am, simply, indebted.
