

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to thank the Algerians who helped me for their hospitality, sympathy, humour and willingness to tell me about their lives. I am especially indebted to three friends who offered me a home, and who shared their warmth, their time, their joys and their sufferings with me. It is not ingratitude, but respect that keeps me from mentioning their names. I truly enjoyed living with them. I would like to thank my supervisors: Anton Blok for his inspiring ideas, Jan Peters for his close reading of various drafts, and Mahfoud Bennoune for his support during fieldwork. My special thanks also to Henk Driessen whose involvement, balanced out by a well-kept distance, was frequently used and abused in order to complete this study.

Students, colleagues, relatives and friends have contributed in various ways to the ideas developed here. I appreciate their encouragement, suggestions and help. I want to acknowledge especially the early encouragements by Kees Jansen, Tuğrul İlter and Rod Aya. M'hammed Dasser, Tuomo Melasuo and Sossie Andezian shared the excitement of doing research during the summer in Aix-en-Provence. Dorothy Bennoune lent me her home and her ear whenever I needed them. Ahmed Ben-Naoum offered more help than I could accept. Huub de Jonge, Britt Fontaine and Fenneke Reysoo commented on parts of the manuscript. Ria de Vos contributed by co-mothering while I was writing. William Christian corrected with great skill and speed errors in grammar and style. I should like to express my thanks to each of them. For various forms of assistance needed for turning a manuscript into a book, I am grateful to Harry Boelaars, L.W. Bonbrake, Richard van den Brink, André Kalden, Marijke Ristivojčević-Lefering, Lutgard Simons-Roelen, and Theo van der Weegen.

The following institutions provided research facilities: the Institute of Cultural and Social Anthropology in Nijmegen; the Institut National d'Etude et d'Analyses pour la Planification; the Centre de Recherches en Économie Appliquée; the Institut des Techniques de Planification et d'Économie Appliquée; and the Centre de Recherches Anthropologiques, Préhistoriques et Ethnographiques in Algiers; and the Centre de Recherches et d'Études sur les Sociétés Méditerranéennes and the Section d'Outre-Mer des Archives Nationales de France, both in Aix-en-Provence, France.
