

Climbing Together

Value Inquiry Book Series

Founding Editor

Robert Ginsberg

Managing Editor

J.D. Mininger

VOLUME 397

Philosophy of Peace

Editor

Danielle Poe, University of Dayton

The titles published in this series are listed at brill.com/vibs and brill.com/pop

Climbing Together

Relational Morality and Meaningful Action in Intercultural Community Engagement

By

Anna Taft

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Cover illustration: Image created by Anna Taft using NightCafe AI (2024). Modifications by Mark DeGrossa.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Taft, Anna (Tandana Foundation director), author.

Title: Climbing together : relational morality and meaningful action in intercultural community engagement / Anna Taft.

Description: Leiden ; Boston : Brill, [2025] | Series: Value inquiry book series ; 0929-8436 Volume 397 | Includes bibliographical references and index. | Summary: "Scholars and commentators have noted the frequent inefficacy of "development," and criticized the power relations it entrenches. Aware of these problems, some North Americans choose to disengage from transnational work. But the reality is that we cannot avoid participating in global networks that affect people in many countries, and there are vast inequalities in access to resources that need to be addressed. Through philosophical insights, narrative accounts, and testimony from community members, we can discover a path between development and disengagement, through which relational morality and meaningful action can enrich intercultural collaboration and yield many fruits"– Provided by publisher.

Identifiers: LCCN 2024036021 | ISBN 9789004707320 (hardback) | ISBN 9789004707344 (ebook)

Subjects: LCSH: Globalization. | Transnationalism–Social aspects. | Cultural relations. | Engagement (Philosophy)

Classification: LCC JZ1318 .T335 2025 | DDC 303.48/2–dc23/eng/20240813
LC record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2024036021>

Typeface for the Latin, Greek, and Cyrillic scripts: "Brill". See and download: brill.com/brill-typeface.

ISSN 0929-8436

ISBN 978-90-04-70732-0 (hardback)

ISBN 978-90-04-70734-4 (e-book)

DOI 10.1163/9789004707344

Copyright 2025 by Anna Taft. Published by Koninklijke Brill BV, Leiden, The Netherlands.

Koninklijke Brill BV incorporates the imprints Brill, Brill Nijhoff, Brill Schönningh, Brill Fink, Brill mentis, Brill Wageningen Academic, Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, Böhlau and V&R unipress.

Koninklijke Brill BV reserves the right to protect this publication against unauthorized use. Requests for re-use and/or translations must be addressed to Koninklijke Brill BV via brill.com or copyright.com.

This book is printed on acid-free paper and produced in a sustainable manner.

Contents

Acknowledgements VII

List of Figures X

- 1 Introduction: Between Development and Disengagement 1
- 2 Dangers of Traditional Approaches to Development 7
 - 1 The View from Above 8
 - 1.1 Alienation 10
 - 1.2 Control 14
 - 1.3 Anonymity 20
 - 1.4 Development 26
 - 2 Overuse of the Mode of Fabrication 29
 - 2.1 Three Modes of Human Activity 31
 - 2.2 Hazards of Applying the Mode of Fabrication to Human Affairs 34
- 3 An Alternative Approach 49
 - 1 An Example 50
 - 2 A Personal Orientation 54
 - 3 Relational Morality 58
 - 3.1 Experiential Moral Obligations 60
 - 3.2 Respect 62
 - 3.3 Responsibility 81
 - 3.4 Inequality and Mutuality 88
 - 4 Opportunities of Action 98
 - 4.1 Containing Instrumentality within an Enduring Space for Action 100
 - 4.2 Strengthening and Instituting Spaces for Action 106
 - 4.3 Opportunities of the Mode of Action in Community Engagement 114
 - 5 Balancing Personal and Detached Perspectives 126
 - 5.1 Personal and Anonymous Care 127
 - 5.2 Group-Level Relationships 131
 - 5.3 Universality and Context-Specificity 139
 - 5.4 Imagining Extended Communities 142

4	Fruits of Engagement	150
1	Unpredictability	150
2	A Note on Volunteerism	155
3	Reaping the Fruits	157
3.1	Communities Improve on Their Own Terms	158
3.2	Communities Gain Sources of Pride and Respect	159
3.3	Communities Strengthen Desired Aspects of Their Cultures and Choose to Change Others	161
3.4	People Enhance and Experience Their Effectiveness	175
3.5	People Grow in Awareness	185
3.6	Friendship	196
5	Conclusion: Messiness, Mistakes, and Meaning	201
	Bibliography	207
	Index	216

Acknowledgements

As its title indicates, this book expresses ideas that can only come into awareness and expression through walking, and sometimes struggling, together with others. I am deeply indebted to the many friends, colleagues, and family members who have shared this journey with me over the last eighteen years and more. It is thanks to their patience, kindness, and wisdom that the experiences that inform this understanding have been possible. I especially want to thank the Pazmiño Sierra family of Panecillo, Ecuador for welcoming me into their home and showing me the importance and durability of intercultural relationships. Vicente Pazmiño, in particular, was an essential partner in the early steps of this endeavor and has continued to be an important member of the team. Moussa Tembiné offered me friendship and hope of finding a shared purpose during my first visit to Mali, without which I would have been unlikely to return. Over the years since then, he has been not only an outstanding leader, guiding so many communities in forming and strengthening spaces for action, but also an important thought partner in articulating the particularities of the unique approach that has evolved through our collaboration. I have learned so much from him and from our shared efforts. The many donors who give to The Tandana Foundation have made this work possible.

Countless friends and partners in the communities surrounding Otavalo, Ecuador and Bandiagara, Mali, as well as staff members and volunteers in various countries have contributed important insights and perspectives that helped me better understand what it is that we are doing together. In particular, I would like to thank those who have given their time to sit with me for interviews: Alberto Alta, Julie Anderson, Tembel Bamia, Humberto Burga, Luis Chicaiza, Adrián Córdova, María Córdova, Tenné Fofana, Claudia Fuerez, Cristina Fuerez, Manuel Fuerez, Margarita Fuerez, Susana Fuerez, Peter Graves, Zachary Graves, Bob Herring, Fatouma Kamia, Ada Kanambaye, Adama Kanambaye, Oumou Kansaye, Ambajugo Kassogué, Kadidia Kassogué, Kessia Kouriba, Fatouma Kouriba, Martha Lanchimba, Audrey Ling, Carlos Lopez, Mónica Lopez, Susan Napier, María Esther Manrique, Mark McGovern, Carmen Morán, Kurikamak Moreta, Segundo Moreta, Housseyni Pamateck, Mamoudou Pamateck, Alberto Panamá, María Panamá, Sisa Panamá, Eduardo Pazmiño, Vicente Pazmiño, Carol Peddie, Maureen Penman, Esther Perugachi, Francisco Perugachi, Humberto Perugachi, Manuel Perugachi, María Perugachi, Matias Perugachi, Susana Perugachi, Fabián Pinsag, Segundo Remache, Sarah Rothschild, Elé Samakan, Jill Spiker, Esaïe Tapily, Anouh Tembiné, Biné Tembiné, Marie Tembiné, Moussa Tembiné, Ousmane Tembiné, Yabiemo Tembiné, Yagouno Tembiné, Moussa Timbiné, Josefina Torres, Maria Torres, Emma Vichill, Boureima Yalcouyé, Hamidou Yalcouyé, Hawa Yalcouyé, Hawa Yanogué, and Kadidia Yanogué.

As this work brings together theory and practice, my intellectual mentors have been equally important in helping to clarify my understanding. Shampa Biswas and Bruce Magnusson at Whitman College helped me begin to think critically about “development” in ways that were integral to the practice I began to form and also suggested resources that were helpful for this project. Many of the ideas expressed in this book developed through my Master of Arts in Liberal Studies program at Skidmore College and benefited from the questions and comments of Sheldon Solomon, Jacqueline Scoones, Mary-Beth O’Brien, and Jason Pribilsky. Danielle Poe has been incredibly supportive of this work and provided innumerable insightful suggestions, from the first independent study she agreed to supervise for me through editing this manuscript and shepherding it to publication. She also introduced me to the Concerned Philosophers for Peace, a thoughtful and welcoming group who allowed me to present parts of this project at their conferences and then published selected aspects of it in two previous Philosophy of Peace volumes. While those chapters do not correspond directly to specific chapters in this book, the material developed in both of them appears in these pages. Comments related to those presentations were helpful in refining my ideas, and I particularly want to thank William Gay and Elizabeth Minnich for sharing feedback on a draft of one of the papers I presented and for corresponding with me about important ideas. Skidmore College provided a grant from its MALS Scholarship Fund that helped me undertake a set of interviews in Mali, which provided key material for developing some of the themes herein. Hugh Taft-Morales and Danika Robison provided helpful feedback on another expression of these ideas.

This book would not have made its way into the world without the support of my colleagues at The Tandana Foundation, especially Aaron DiMartino, who encouraged me to devote the necessary time and attention to writing while they took care of much of the business of running the organization. My family has provided constant material and emotional support, without which I could not have even begun the adventure of connecting with people in parts of the world far from my home. My parents, Hope and Bob Taft, offered the resources, the examples, and the courage to strike out on a new path and have supported me unfailingly all along the way. John Tsukayama, my husband, takes care of innumerable practicalities so that I am free to think and to act and helps me see experiences from a different perspective.

I am grateful to all those who have welcomed me into relationship and agreed to climb together, forgiving each other’s errors, allowing each other freedom, and generating together the power to act. They have all helped me to live out my mission of acting in ways that bring relational virtues to life, growing in awareness of the human condition and our moral imperatives, and bringing together action and understanding such that each can enrich the other. My great hope is that this book may serve as one more step, leading us in a positive direction.

Figures

- 2.1 An airplane window view and a ground-level view present very different opportunities for engaging. 9
- 2.2 Fabrication involves making things that become part of the world 30
- 2.3 Action is what goes on directly between people. 32
- 2.4 “They come with their idea and tell the people, no matter what, you have to do this.” 42
- 2.5 “I always thought that COVID-19 did not exist, and it was a project of the powerful countries who wanted to raise funds to eat and to show poor countries that they know how to make things up.” 45
- 2.6 A shallot storehouse in Sal-Dimi, Mali was never used. 48
- 3.1 As a young volunteer in Ecuador, I was amazed by the relationships I formed. 52
- 3.2 On my first visit to Mali, I formed relationships with residents of Kansongo. 53
- 3.3 Taking a personal approach, we see others eye-to-eye, recognizing both their and our personhood. 55
- 3.4 “Don’t forget us, and come work with us hand in hand.” 57
- 3.5 Seeing the face of another, we are called to a moral relation. 59
- 3.6 Respect involves listening carefully. 63
- 3.7 “They have asked us about everything with the greatest respect.” 65
- 3.8 “People were asking me questions, as if I were someone important.” 67
- 3.9 “We work together mutually.” 72
- 3.10 “We have shared with you, and you have shared with us.” 77
- 3.11 “When you are climbing a tree, someone can support you, but you also have to hold on tight.” 88
- 3.12 “If we are friends, we talk together.” 96
- 3.13 A space for action can contain the fabrication needed to create things. 101
- 3.14 The health center in Sal is a model for others thanks to the salutary combination of action and fabrication that informed its creation. 107
- 3.15 In women’s leadership workshops, participants appear to each other. 109
- 3.16 A woman who has participated in a leadership workshop stands up to speak in a meeting at a township hall. 111
- 3.17 Committees provide a space for action. 112
- 3.18 A grain bank combines labor, work, and action, offering millet for consumption as a reliable part of the world through discussion and deliberation. 114
- 3.19 “It is for the community.” 118

- 3.20 “This is also a motivation for all the people who benefit, sharing and making relationships.” 119
- 3.21 “I love it, and that is why I am on so many committees.” 120
- 3.22 Claudia Fuevez teaching guests how to make quimbolitos in 2005 (above) and operating her successful cooking school in 2024 (below). 123
- 3.23 “If I can help someone as they do, I will be very happy.” 126
- 4.1 When I encountered the Pazmiño-Sierra family in 1998, I had no idea that 26 years later the same expanded family would be an important part of my life. 154
- 4.2 “The community has made great strides forward.” 159
- 4.3 Having a modern school building has given residents of Dani increased pride, interest in education, and ability to retain teachers. 161
- 4.4 “I think that being part of the indigenous Otavalo culture is something very important, and, sadly, today it is being lost.” 164
- 4.5 Kessia Kouriba reads the first storybook published in the Tommo So language. 168
- 4.6 Residents of Sal-Dimi perform a bendíé dance for visiting volunteers. 169
- 4.7 “This has had an impact in the village. Girls don’t marry early like they did before.” 173
- 4.8 “When something is ours, we value it more.” 176
- 4.9 When they participate in management committees, village residents increase their capacity to lead initiatives and their confidence in their abilities. 179
- 4.10 “I’ve learned that I can get through things that are difficult.” 184
- 4.11 “I’ve benefited from many advantages that have helped raise my standard of living. Now it’s my turn to share those benefits with other people through my work for the foundation.” 186
- 4.12 “I feel my experiences with Tandana have carried over to my own community here in Maine.” 187
- 4.13 “It was good for me to know there is another way of living that is different from here.” 189
- 4.14 Moussa Tembiné and Housseyni Pamateck experience dislocation in Miami, Florida. 191
- 4.15 “If more programs like this existed, there wouldn’t be wars.” 197

