

Acknowledgements

This book was written as a thesis for the Doctorate of Laws, Leiden University. I am most grateful, first of all, to my supervisor, Professor Peter Kooijmans. Throughout my working at this study he allowed me to make use of his wisdom while at the same time affording inspiration and freedom. He never permitted his demanding task as a Judge at the International Court of Justice to stand in the way of discussing my thesis with me for many hours. I also wish to express my profound gratitude to Professor John Dugard, who acted as referent. I benefited very much from his wise suggestions and advice.

The process of writing a thesis cannot be gone through without the support of many people. This book is no exception to that rule. I thank my mother, Amy Raič-van Es, and my sister, Romana Raič, both of whom, despite so many difficulties, have always kept faith in me as well as in the fact that this work would be completed. I thank my late father Miše Raič, who motivated me to interpret the facts of life as objectively as possible. I thank Stella Zerbo for her love, warmth, patience and impatience. I thank Marianne Jonker for supporting me and this project for so many years. I am fully aware that this was not an easy task. Special thanks are owed to René Lefeber, without whom this work would never have seen the light of the day in its present form and with whom I have discussed almost every issue in it. I also, and in particular, wish to thank Mrs. A. Broekers-Knol, Head of the Moot Court Department of Leiden University, who believed in my scientific skills and realized the funds for the research. I thank Niels Blokker for his advice and inspiration. I thank Guido Biessen who always tried to (and eventually did) convince me that I could cut a few pages or sections (if possible a chapter) and who always kept on motivating me to finish the work.

The Hague, May 2002

DR