

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book originated as a doctoral dissertation in the department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures at Indiana University and it is with pleasure that I acknowledge my indebtedness to my advisor, Suzanne Stetkevych, who directed my work with thoughtful guidance, insightful criticism and gentle discipline from the very moment the project was conceived. I also wish to thank her for accepting my book for publication in the Brill Studies in Middle Eastern Literatures series. I have also benefited from the comments and criticism of Paul Losensky, James Monroe and Jaroslav Stetkevych and wish to extend them my heartfelt thanks. I wish I could thank the late Wadie Jwaideh for his comments and criticism, and for the interest he always showed in my life and work over the quarter-of-a-century that I had the good fortune to know him. I want to thank my editors at Brill Academic Publishers, Ms. Gera van Bedaf and Mrs. Trudy Kamperveen, for their patience and cooperation in publishing matters. I thank too Sandra Gamal and my friend Neil MacDonald here in Cairo for helping me to compile my indices. I want to thank my family for their unquestioning love and continued support. My greatest debt, however, is to my wife and fellow traveler, Bridget McKinney, for her warm and unfailing support and encouragement, her patience and understanding, and her inspiration, without which I most certainly would not be where I am today.
