

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

DAN H. ANDERSEN, Ph.D. was born in 1956. He is a part-time lecturer at the Saxo Institute, Department of History, University of Copenhagen. He has published on Danish eighteenth century price history, shipping, trade, naval history, and Denmark's relationship with the Ottoman Empire and the Barbary States.

MANUEL BUSTOS-RODRIGUEZ is a Professor of Modern History at the University of Cádiz. He has published extensively on the History of the city of Cádiz and its relationship with the outside world. He has also worked on the interrelationship of the various regions of Spain with one another and their trade with the colonies.

FRANÇOIS CROUZET is Professor Emeritus of the Department of History at the University of Paris-Sorbonne, is the author of The Victorian Economy: The First Industrialists; Britain, France, and International Commerce: From Louis XIV to Victoria. He has published extensively on the origins and early stages of modern industrialisation in Britain and in France as well as numerous other studies of the European economy.

GUILLAUME DAUDIN finished his Ph.D. in Economics at Université Paris Panthéon-Sorbonne (Paris-I) and the London School of Economics in 2001. After a year as a post doctorate at Stanford University, he is now an economist at the Globalisation department of the Observatoire français des conjonctures économiques (OFCE), which is part of Science Po. He works on historical and contemporaneous globalisation and growth.

PIETER C. EMMER is Professor in the History of the European Expansion at the University of Leiden. He was a visiting fellow at Churchill College, Cambridge, UK, the Wissenschaftskolleg Berlin and at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study (2002–2003), The Netherlands. He served as visiting professor at the University of Texas at Austin and at the University of Hamburg, Germany (1996–97). He is the author of The Dutch in the Atlantic Economy, 1580–1880 (Aldershot, 1998) and of De Nederlandse slavenhandel, 1500–1850 (Amsterdam, 2000)

[The Dutch Slave Trade, 1500–1850, translations in English and French]. In 2004 he was nominated as a member of the European Academy (London).

BOUDA ETEMAD is Professor of History at the Universities of Geneva and Lausanne. He is the author of La possession du monde. Poids et mesures de la colonisation (Complexe, Bruxelles 2000) and De l'utilité des empires. Colonisation et prospérité de l'Europe (Armand Colin, Paris 2005).

GÉRARD LE BOUËDEC is Professor of Modern History at the University of South Brittany and is the director of SOLITO. He has published more than fifty articles. He is the author or co-author of 15 works dealing with coastal traffic, the activities and innovations of companies based on the seaboard, and on the merchants, soldiers and fishing industry in French ports from the sixteenth through the nineteenth centuries.

MICHEL MORINEAU, now retired, began his career by studying the effect of the arrival of precious metals from the Americas on Europe. He then began studying colonial trade and agriculture. He is the author or co-author of many books, as well as the author of several hundred articles. He is one of the best-known and most well-respected Historians of the European Economic History in the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries

LEOS MÜLLER, Ph.D. (1998) is Associate Professor of History at Uppsala University, Sweden. His recent publications include The Merchant Houses of Stockholm, c. 1640–1800. A Comparative Study of Early-Modern Entrepreneurial Behaviour (1998), and Consuls, Corsairs, and Commerce. The Swedish Consular Service and Long-distance Shipping, 1720–1815 (2004). He is also co-editor of Statehood Before and Beyond Ethnicity. Minor States and Eastern Europe, 1600–2000 (2005).

PATRICK O'BRIEN, FBA, former Director of the Institute of Historical Research, University of London and President of the British Economic History Society is currently Centennial Professor of Economic History at the London School of Economics where he convenes the Global Economic History Network and a masters programme in global economic history. His last book was P. K. O'Brien, ed., Urban Achievement in Early Modern Europe: Golden Ages in Antwerp, Amsterdam and London (2001).

OLIVIER PÉTRÉ-GRENOUILLEAU, Ph.D. (1994), University of Rennes, is a Professor in Modern and Contemporary History at the University of Lorient (France) and a fellow of the Institut Universitaire de France. He has published ten of books since 1995 mainly devoted to the history of Nantes, of the French maritime economy, of the colonial expansion of Europe and of the slave trades. His most recent work is the critically acclaimed, Les traites négrières; Essai d'Histoire Globale, (2004) which has received the Prix de l'Académie Française, and the Prix du Sénat.

HORST PIETSCHMANN is currently retired. He was the chair of Latin American History at the University of Hamburg from 1985—2005. He is a specialist in Early Modern Iberian History, and in Colonial Latin American History, as well as in European expansion. He has published eight books and over 200 articles.

PIERRICK POURCHASSE is a senior lecturer and research fellow in the Department of History at the University of West Brittany in Brest. His research deals with economic relations between France and Northern Europe in the eighteenth century. He is the author of Le commerce du Nord. Les échanges entre la France et l'Europe septentrionale au XVIII^e siècle, (Rennes: PUR, 2006).

JESSICA V. ROITMAN is a Ph.D. candidate in the History of European Expansion at the University of Leiden. Her work focuses on Sephardic trade networks in the Portuguese and Dutch Atlantic. She has forthcoming publications in Migration, Integration, Minorities, a European Encyclopaedia to be published by Cambridge University Press and in the Portuguese Studies Review.

PATRICK VERLEY has spent the greater part of his career in France where he has taught Economic History and Economic Statistics at the University of Paris—I Sorbonne and, later at the University of Paris—viii, between 1969—1990. He has published extensively on global Economic History as well as on Western Industrialisation. He has been President of the Association of Economic and Social Sciences,

Vice-President of the French Association of Economic Historians, a member of the Scientific Committee for data exchange in the Social Sciences, a member of the National Council of Universities, a member of the Board of Directors of the l'Ecole Normale Supérieure Lettres (Lyon), and a member of the editorial committee of the journal Histoire et Mesure. He is currently Professor of Economic History at the University of Geneva.