

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Bob Scribner would have liked to thank the British Academy for its award of the Marc Fitch Readership in 1989-91 which relieved him from teaching and administrative duties, enabling him to research and write most of the essays collected here. He would also have wanted to thank Clare College Cambridge, where he taught, the British Council for an Exchange Fellowship in the former German Democratic Republic, the Max-Planck-Institut für Geschichte for a Visiting Fellowship, the University of Melbourne for a Miegunyah Visiting Distinguished Fellowship in the Humanities, the Robert-Bosch-Institut für die Geschichte der Medizin Stuttgart for a Research award, and the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for a Research Fellowship. Bob owed a great deal to discussion with other colleagues, and I think he would have liked to mention in particular Christiane Andersson, Tom Brady, Peter Burke, Hans Jürgen Goertz, Marion Kobelt-Groch, Susan Karant Nunn, Bruce Mansfield, Heiko A. Oberman, Polly O'Hanlon, Ros Pesman, Miri Rubin, Hans-Christoph Rublack, Ulinka Rublack, Klaus Schreiner, Tom Scott, James Stayer, Lee Palmer Wandel and Charles Zika. I am sure there are others.

Putting this collection together has involved asking a great many people for help. I was overwhelmed by the warmth with which people responded, sharing their memories of Bob and going out of their way to assist in putting the collection together. First, I must thank Bob's widow, Lois Rutherford Scribner, who answered endless queries and supported the enterprise throughout. Heiko A. Oberman found a home for the manuscript in his series. Virginia Reinburg, Lee Palmer Wandel and Lois Rutherford Scribner found the way through Bob's papers; Tom Scott assisted with the bibliography; Bridget Heal shared stories about Bob and acted as picture-sleuth. I would also like to thank the staff of the Library of Western Art in the Ashmolean Library, Oxford, History Today; and Katherine Gingrich Brady, Tom Brady, Philip Broadhead, Kaspar von Greyerz, Trevor Johnson, Joachim Kuolt, Hartmut Lehmann, Hans Medick, Bernd Moeller, Hans-Christoph Rublack, Ulinka Rublack, Pamela Selwyn, Nick Stargardt and Charles Zika.