

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Karin Arts is Associate Professor in International law and Development at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague. Her research interests concern international law and development, human rights, environment and the development cooperation policy of the European Union. Her publications include: Integrating Human Rights into Development Cooperation: The Case of the Lomé Convention, Kluwer Law International, The Hague/London/Boston, 2000; and (edited with A. Dickson), European Development Policy: From Model to Symbol?, Manchester University Press, Manchester, 2003.

Peter Baehr is Professor Emeritus of Human Rights from Utrecht University and former Director of the Netherlands Institute of Human Rights. His research focuses on various aspects of human rights and foreign policy. His publications include: Human Rights: Universality in Practice, Palgrave, Houndmills, Basingstoke, paperback ed. 2001; and 'Trial and errors: The Netherlands and human rights', in D.P. Forsythe (ed.), Human Rights and Comparative Foreign Policy, United Nations University Press, Tokyo/New York/Paris, 2000, pp. 49-86.

Jessica Byron is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Government, University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. Her major research interests are multilateralism and small states, European-Caribbean relations, and Caribbean-Latin American relations. Her publications include: 'Square dance diplomacy: Cuba and CARIFORUM, the European Union and the United States', European Review of Latin American and Caribbean Studies no. 68, 2000, pp. 23-46; and 'The Impact of globalization on the Caribbean', in D. Benn, K. Hall eds., Globalization, A Calculus of Inequality: Perspectives from the South, Ian Randle Publishers, Kingston, 2000.

Jeffrey Harrod is Professor Emeritus from the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague and currently teaches at the International School for Humanities and Social Sciences, at the University of Amsterdam. He writes on labour in the global economy and social theory. His most recent work (edited with Robert O'Brien) is Global Unions?: Theory and Strategy of Organised Labour in the Global Economy, Routledge, London, 2002.

Selma van Londen is Associate Professor in Cultural Anthropology at Utrecht University. Her research activities focus on mythology, ecology, identity formation and the Inuit, including Inuit sculpture. Her publications include 'From culture to identity – A worthwhile venture', in F. Lindo and M. van Niekerk (eds.), Dedication and Detachment, Het Spinhuis, Amsterdam, 2001, pp. 165-179; and 'Citizenship in the new Europe', in M. Boone et al. (eds.), Empire and Identity, VUB: Brussels (forthcoming).

Paschal Mihyo is Senior Lecturer in Labour Studies at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague. His research interests concern human rights and development, intellectual property rights and the World Trade Organization, all with a particular focus on Africa. His publications include: 'A context of sharp economic decline', with F. Schiphorst, in J. Kelly, Industrial Relations: Critical Perspectives, Vol. 1, chapter 18, Routledge, London, 2001; and 'EU Environmental Regulations and their Potential on Africa's Market Access', in D. Olowu et al. (eds.), Governance, Institutional Reforms and Policy Outcomes In Africa: Lessons for Namibia, Kumarian Press (forthcoming).

S. Mansoob Murshed is Associate Professor in International Economics and Conflict Studies at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague. Previously he was a research fellow on conflict and globalization at the United Nations University/World Institute for Development Economics Research in Helsinki, Finland. An economist, he is also interested in political economy and macroeconomic theory and policy. His recent publications include: 'Civil war, conflict and underdevelopment', 39 Journal of Peace Research no. 4, pp. 387-393, July 2002; and (with T. Addison and P. Le Billon), 'Conflict in Africa: The cost of peaceful behaviour', 11 Journal of African Economies no. 3, 2002, pp. 365-386.

Hans Opschoor is Rector and Professor of the Economics of Environment and Development at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, and Professor of Environmental Economics at the Vrije Universiteit, Amsterdam. His research interests include economic aspects of sustainable development, international economic systems and institutions, global public goods and human rights. Among his recent publications are: 'Economic growth, the environment and welfare: Are they compatible?', in: R. Seroa da Motta (ed.), Environmental Economics and Policy Making in Developing Countries: Current Issues, Edward Elgar, Cheltenham, 2001, pp. 13-36; and 'Towards security, stability and sustainability oriented strategies of development in Eastern Africa', in: M.A.M. Salih et al. (ed.), African Pastoralism: Conflict, Institutions and Government, Pluto Press, London, 2001, pp. 23-38.

Raymond Ranjeva from Madagascar is a Judge at the International Court of Justice in The Hague since 6 February 1991. He is a member of the Académie Nationale des Arts, Lettres et Sciences de Madagascar established in 1902, of the Institut de Droit International and Associé de l'Académie des Sciences d'Outre-

Mer in Paris. His research interests include international law and the position of developing countries, human rights and environment. Recent publications are: 'Les organisations non gouvernementales et la mise en oeuvre du droit international', 270 Recueil des cours de l'Académie de droit international, Martinus Nijhoff Publishers, The Hague, 1997, pp. 11-105; and 'La Cour internationale de justice et les zones maritimes', INDEMER, 2002.

Arie de Ruijter is Professor of Cultural and Social Anthropology at Utrecht University and Professor of Social Sciences at the University of Tilburg. He is also director of the national research school CERES. He published extensively on structural anthropology, methodology of the social sciences and multiculturalism. His recent research activities focus on identity formation, citizenship and identity. Recent publications include: 'Multiculturalism and social integration in Europe', 22 International Political Science Review, 2001, pp. 55-85; and 'Globalization: A challenge to the social sciences', in F. Schuurman, Globalization and Development Studies, Sage, London, 2001, pp. 31-45.

M.A. Mohamed Salih is Professor of Politics of Development both at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague and the Department of Political Science, University of Leiden. He is Vice Chair of the International Human Dimension of Global Change, of the International Council for Social Science and the International Union of Sciences. Among his books are: Environmental Politics and Liberation in Contemporary Africa, Kluwer Academic Publishers, Dordrecht/Boston/London, 1999; and African Political Parties: Evolution, Institutionalisation and Governance, Pluto Press, London, 2003.

Nico Schrijver is Professor of International Law at the Vrije Universiteit, Amsterdam and the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague. His research interests include the United Nations system, human rights, sustainable development, international environmental law, legal aspects of peace and security and international development cooperation. Recently he published 'The changing nature of state sovereignty', 70 British Yearbook of International Law 1999, Oxford University Press, 2000, pp. 65-98 and 'Responding to international terrorism: Moving the frontiers of international law for "Enduring Freedom"?', 48 Netherlands International Law Review, 2001, pp. 271-291.

Surya Subedi is Professor of International Law at Middlesex University in London, and a Visiting Professor at the Department of Law, SOAS, University of London and at the Faculty of Law of Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu, Nepal. Prior to this he was Professor of Law and Director of Postgraduate Affairs at the University of Hull; Senior Lecturer in International Law and Development at the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague; and under-secretary at the International Law Division of the Ministry of Law and Justice of Nepal. He is currently General Editor of the Asian Yearbook of International Law.

Thanh-Dam Truong is Senior Lecturer in Women, Gender and Development Studies at the Institute of Social Studies in The Hague. Her research interests are in the area of global political economy and women's labour, gender analysis, human development, human rights and human security. Trafficking and transnational organized crime is one of the key areas of investigation. Her recent articles include 'A feminist perspective on the Asian miracle and crisis: Enlarging the conceptual map of human development', 1 Journal of Human Development no. 1, 2000, and 'Gender, exploitative migration and the sex industry: A European perspective', 7 Gender, Technology and Development no. 1, 2003.

The editors thank Ms. Janna van der Meulen, Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, for all assistance rendered in preparing and printing the various versions of the book manuscript, and Eelke Heemskerk, University of Amsterdam, Amsterdam School for Social Science Research, for providing the bibliography included at the end of this volume.