Acknowledgments

This volume is the product of an international workshop on authority in Islam in Muslim Eurasia, convened at Indiana University Bloomington in March 2017. The workshop constituted a part of the Indiana University's Islamic Studies Program's initiative on the 'Fragmentation of Religious Authority in Islam,' an initiative that closely examines one of the most fiercely contested phenomena among Muslims in both Muslim-minority and Muslim-majority societies. Additional international workshops on this theme, with a regional focus on South Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa, were since convened at Indiana University's India Gateway Office in New Delhi in January, 2019, and the university's Gateway Office in Berlin in October, 2019.

The 2017 Bloomington workshop benefitted from the participation of many scholars. We wish to thank the presenters and discussants whose contributions and remarks were not included in this volume but whose input is very much reflected in its contents. They include: Ulan Bigozhin, Noor Borbieva, Alfrid Bustanov, Ian Campbell, Jamal J. Elias, Seema Golestaneh, Marianne Kamp, Paul Losensky, Patrick Michelson, Leone Musgrave, James Pickett, Nazif Shahrani, Gulnaz Sibgatullina, and Jennifer Webster. We are especially grateful to Robert Crouch, Assistant Director of Indiana University's Islamic Studies Program, for his invaluable organizational, logistical, and editorial skills.

We wish to acknowledge the financial support of multiple agencies and institutions. At Indiana University, the project received grants from the university's New Frontiers in the Arts and Humanities Program, the College of Arts and Humanities Institute, the Office of the Vice President for International Affairs, the Inner Asian and Uralic National Resource Center, the Russian and East European Institute, the Hamilton Lugar School of Global and International Studies, and the Institute for European Studies. We also wish to acknowledge our valued partnership with the Austrian Science Fund (FWF) START Program Y704 – Seeing Like an Archive that assisted in bringing several scholars from Europe and Russia to Bloomington.

Notes on Contributors

Sergey Abashin

is Professor of Anthropology at the European University at Saint-Petersburg (Russia). His main research topics include imperial and Soviet transformations in Central Asia, and post-Soviet migrations. He has published two monographs (in Russian): Nationalisms in Central Asia: in search of identity (St. Petersburg: Aleteia, 2007), and Soviet kishlak: between colonialism and modernization (Moscow: NLO, 2015), as well as articles about Central Asian Islamic studies: “The Logic of Islamic Practice: A Religious Conflict in Central Asia,” Central Asian Survey, 25/3 (2006), pp. 267–286; “A Prayer for Rain: Practicing being Soviet and Muslim,” Journal of Islamic Studies, 25/2 (2014), pp. 178–200.

Ulfat (Ulfatbek) Abdurasulov

(Ph.D. 2009, History Institute, Tashkent) is a Research Fellow at the Austrian Academy of Sciences. His research focuses on the history of Islamic Central Asia, the history of the Russian protectorates in Central Asia, early modern diplomatic history, as well as the history of early modern record-keeping and knowledge production in Central Eurasia. Dr. Abdurasulov’s publications appeared in academic journals, such as Der Islam, Ab Imperio, Islamic Law and Society, Itinerario, and JESHO. Together with Paolo Sartori, he co-authored the monograph Seeking Justice at the Court of the Khans of Khiva (19th–Early 20th Centuries) (Leiden: Brill, 2020).

Bakhtiyar Babajanov

is Senior Researcher at the Institute of Oriental Studies of the Uzbek Academy of Sciences, Tashkent. He is the author of Kokandskoe Khanstvo: politika, vlast’, religiia (Kyoto-Tashkent, 2010) and Epigrafika v arkhitekturnom landshafte Khivy: Mechety, pogrebal’nye komplekсы, medrese, dvortsy, vorota (Vienna: Austrian Academy of Sciences, 2020).

Devin DeWeese

is Professor Emeritus of Central Eurasian Studies at Indiana University. His research has focused on issues of Islamization in Central and Inner Asia, the social and political roles of Sufi communities, and Sufi literature and hagiography in Persian and Chaghatay Turkic. He is the author of Islamization and Native Religion in the Golden Horde (1994) and (with Ashirbek Muminov) of Islamization and Sacred Lineages in Central Asia, vol. 1: Opening the Way for Islam: The Ishaq Bab Narrative, 14th–19th Centuries (2013). His most recent article is “Encountering Saints in the Hallowed Ground of a Regional Landscape: The ‘Description of Khwārazm’ and the Experience of Pilgrimage in 19th-Century Central Asia,” in Saintly Spheres and Islamic Landscapes, ed. Daphna Ephrat, Ethel Sara Wolper, and Paulo G. Pinto (Leiden, 2021).

Allen Frank

is an independent scholar in Takoma Park Maryland, USA. His focus of interest is the Islamic history of Russia and Central Asia. His recent publications include Kazakh Muslims in the Red Army, 1939–1945 (Leiden: Brill, 2022), Gulag Miracles: Sufis and Stalinist Repression in Kazakhstan (Vienna: Austrian Academy of Sciences, 2019), Saduaqas Ghilmani, Biographies of the Islamic Scholars of Our Times I–II, (Istanbul: IRCICA, 2018) (co-editor with Ashirbek Muminov and Aytzhan Nurmanova).

Benjamin Gatling

is Associate Professor in the English Department and Director of the Folklore Program at George Mason University. His research interests include oral narrative, performance, the ethnography of communication, and Persianate oral traditions. He is the author of Expressions of Sufi Culture in Tajikistan (University of Wisconsin Press, 2018).

Agnès Kefeli

is Clinical Full Professor of Religious Studies at Arizona State University and the author of Becoming Muslim in Imperial Russia, which received the 2015 Reginald Zelnik Book Prize of the Association for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies. She is especially interested in conversion, popular contestation of official identities, production of religious knowledge, collective memory, and women’s activities in the religious sphere, in the past as well as in the present. Her work draws on fieldwork observations, Russian-language archival documents, and Turkic literature, which has played and still plays an important role in the Islamization and re-Islamization of Eurasia and Central Asia. To support her current research on various forms of Tatar enchantment in Soviet and Post-Soviet Eurasia, she was awarded a National Humanities Center Fellowship (Benjamin N. Duke Fellowship of the Research Triangle Foundation) and several summer fellowships from the Slavic and Eastern European Center of the University of Illinois in Urbana Champaign. Her latest articles include: “Noah’s Ark Landed in the Ural Mountains: Ethnic and Ecological Apocalypse in Tatarstan,” published by Russian Review, and “Varieties of Tatar Esotericism in Post-Soviet Russia,” which will be published by the same journal.

Paolo Sartori

is Senior Research Associate at the Austrian Academy of Sciences, where he also serves as the Chairman of the Committee for the Study of Islam in Central Eurasia (1552–2000s). He has two main fields of interest in his current research: the social and intellectual history of Muslim communities living under Tsarist and Soviet rule; and practices of record-keeping and knowledge production in the Muslim world in the early modern and modern period. He is the author of Visions of Justice: Sharia and Cultural Change in Russian Central Asia (Leiden: Brill, 2016), Eksperimenty imperii: Adat, shariat i proizvodstvo znaniy v Kazakhskoi stepi (Moscow: NLO 2019), with Pavel Shabley, and Seeking Justice at the Court of the Khans of Khiva (19th–Early 20th Centuries) (Leiden: Brill 2020), with Ulfat Abdurasulov. He also serves as the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of the Economic and Social History of the Orient and the Journal of Central Asian History (Brill).

Wendell Schwab

is an academic adviser in the Bellasario College of Communications at the Pennsylvania State University. He writes about Islam, media, and nationalism in Kazakhstan. His publications have appeared in Central Asian Affairs, Central Asian Survey, and Contemporary Islam.

Ron Sela

is Associate Professor of Central Asian history in the Department of Central Eurasian Studies at Indiana University Bloomington, where he also serves as Director of the Sinor Research Institute for Inner Asian Studies. He has been studying Central Asian history and historiography, and self-representation in Muslim literary traditions. Sela is the author of The Legendary Biographies of Tamerlane: Islam and Heroic Apocrypha in Central Asia (Cambridge University Press, 2011).

Pavel Shabley

is Associate Professor at the Kostanay branch of Chelyabinsk State University, Kazakhstan. His major research interest is the history of Islam in the Kazakh Steppe and the study of the Orenburg Mohammedan Spiritual Assembly. His recent publications include “Semia Iaushevikh i ee okruzhenie,” Acta Slavica Iaponica, 38 (2017), pp. 23–50; with Paolo Sartori, Eksperimenty imperii: Adat, shariat i proizvodstvo znaniy v Kazakhskoi stepi (Moscow: NLO, 2019).

Shamil Shikhaliev

Ph.D. in History, is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Oriental Studies, Moscow, and Research Fellow at the University of Amsterdam.
