

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The primary objective of the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization 1995 Yearbook is to provide information to the international community about the nations, peoples, and minorities who are Members of UNPO. This book would not have been possible without the help and support of UNPO Members who shared their views, concerns, and knowledge. In this first volume of the UNPO Yearbook, the section on UNPO Members focuses on background information. In the future, this section will concentrate on developments relative to UNPO Members communities in that year. I am deeply indebted to UNPO Members for their support towards the production of this book.

I would like also to thank especially all the volunteer UNPO workers who helped to make this book possible. My thanks also go to Selma Hoedt and Sabine Wesseldijk of Kluwer Law International for their direction and guidance.

Though great care was taken in producing this Yearbook, I regret any mistakes that may have been made in editing and recognise them as my responsibility.
