Submission of Articles

The Yearbook Law & Legal Practice in East Asia welcomes articles and suggestions for articles from academics, legal practitioners, national and international civil servants and research students focusing on the most topical issues in East Asian law and practice.

Copyright

Authors must indicate if their articles have been submitted or published elsewhere even if in a different form. If any part of the manuscript is subject to copyright then clearance must be obtained and sent to the editors. Work which is to be published in a book prior to its publication in article form is not acceptable. All articles published in the Yearbook Law & Legal Practice in East Asia are subject to the Yearbook's copyright and may not be published elsewhere without the Yearbook's consent.

Autobiographical note

Each contributor should supply, with his manuscript, his full name, postal address, telephone number, fax number, e-mail, appointment or job description, the name of his organisation and a summary of his experience, achievements and qualifications, whether business, professional or academic. The autobiographical details will be used for the 'List of Contributors' in the Yearbook.

Please send manuscripts and correspondence to the mailing address. In preparing manuscripts authors are kindly asked to follow style rules and citation form of the Yearbook. A list of instructions for authors is available.
