

Notes on Contributors

Stephen Bornemann is a biochemist and Project Leader in the Nitrogen Fixation Laboratory at the John Innes Centre in Norwich. He has his main research interests in plant biochemistry and has several years' experience as a biochemist in the biotechnology industry.

Kerron Harvey is a Technology Transfer Adviser based at the University of Liverpool, UK. She recently completed her PhD at the University of Stirling, focusing on university IP policies.

Michael Jackson was with the Group Patents and Agreements office of the Wellcome Foundation Ltd until his recent retirement. He has extensive experience as an intellectual property manager in the UK pharmaceutical industry.

Mark Leese is based at the Science Studies Unit, University of Edinburgh as a doctoral research student. His main interests lie in the sociology of intellectual property especially as it applies to biotechnology.

Margaret Llewelyn is Deputy Director of the Sheffield Institute of Biotechnology Law and Ethics at the University of Sheffield. She has a long-standing interest in patenting of biotechnology and plant breeders' rights.

Kathryn Packer is Visiting Research Fellow at the Science and Technology Studies Unit, Anglia University, Cambridge, UK; she is based at the government Office of Science and Technology, London. Her postgraduate study was completed at the Science Policy Research Unit, University of Sussex.

Eric P. Raciti is at the Office of Legislative and International Affairs at the US Patent Office. His law degree was from the Catholic University of America in Washington DC, and he completed his Masters at Katholieke Universiteit in Leuven, Belgium. He has been a Patent Examiner since 1990.

Gavin C. Reid is Professor of Economics at the University of St Andrews, Scotland, and Director of the Centre for Research into Industry, Enterprise, Finance and the Firm (CRIEFF). He has research expertise in the field of the economics and intellectual property and the firm.

Margaret R. Sheen is Director of the Emerging Technologies Research and Assessment Centre, University of Strathclyde. She has a background in natural sciences and has worked in technology transfer as a practitioner for a number of years.

Mark Shurmer is Economics Consultant at National Economic Research Associates, London, specialising in broadcasting and telecommunications. He was formerly at Brunel University in the Department of Economics.

Pamela A. Siler is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics and Law at the Dundee Institute of Technology.

Julia A. Smith is a research assistant at the Centre for Research into Industry, Enterprise, Finance and the Firm (CRIEFF), University of St Andrews, Scotland, undertaking research on innovation and the firm.

Ruth Soetendorp is Head of Department of Law in the School of Finance and Law at Bournemouth University, UK. Her main research interests relate to the delivery and management of intellectual property in higher education.

Andrew Webster is Director of the Science and Technology Studies Unit (SATSU) at Anglia University in Cambridge, UK. As a sociologist, he has worked on the commercialisation of public sector science for a number of years.