It is the policy of The American Society of International Law not to take an official position, by resolution or otherwise, upon controversial questions. The views expressed in the address, remarks and discussions delivered at the Joint Conference and appearing in its printed Proceedings are those of the individual speakers and are not to be taken as representing the views of the Society.

The American Society of International Law was organized in 1906 and incorporated by special Act of Congress in 1950. Its goals are 'to foster the study of international law and to promote the establishment and maintenance of international relations on the basis of law and justice.'

For more than a half century concerned with problems of international order and the legal framework for international relations, the Society serves as a meeting place, forum and collegial research center for scholars, officials, practising lawyers, students and others. The Society is hospitable to all viewpoints in its meetings and its publications. Those publications include the American Journal of International Law, International Legal Materials, Proceedings of the Annual Meeting, occasional papers and books (many of which are the product of the panels of the Society's Board of Review and Development). A Society membership exceeding 5000 is drawn from some 100 countries. Membership is open to all, whatever their nationality or profession. For information, please write to the Membership Secretary, The American Society of International Law, 2223 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., 20008-2864. Telephone (202) 939-6000; FAX (202) 939-6000.

The Nederlandse Vereniging voor Internationaal Recht (Netherlands Society of International Law) was founded in 1910 as the Dutch Branch of the International Law Association. The goals of the Vereniging are the study and advancement of private and public international law. To this end, the Vereniging organizes activities on the national level and also participates in the activities of the International Law Association.

The Vereniging organizes an Annual Meeting where extensive reports on private or public international law topics are discussed. Within the Vereniging there are twelve Working Groups devoted to the study of the same area as those covered by the various Committees of the International Law Association. Every two years the Vereniging awards the François Prize for the best paper on public or private international law written by a law student or young lawyer.

The preliminary reports prepared for the Annual Meeting are published in advance in the Vereniging's publication, Mededelingen, and the proceedings of the Annual Meeting based on the discussion of these reports are subsequently published in a follow-up issue of the Mededelingen.

Membership of the Vereniging is open to natural and legal persons, and there are presently nearly 600 members. Additional information concerning membership and the activities of the Vereniging is available from the Secretariat, Alexanderstraat 22, 2514 JM The Hague, The Netherlands, Telephone (070) 3420300; FAX (070) 3420359.
