

International Studies on Military Ethics

Editor-in-Chief: Ted van Baarda

International Studies on Military Ethics is a peer reviewed series of monographs, theses and edited volumes. The series aims to promote the scholarly analysis and practical teaching of the complete spectrum of military ethics, to include the ethical aspects of the jus ad bellum, the jus in bello, the jus post bellum and the ethical aspects of international peacekeeping.

It will, moreover, explore interactions with related fields of interest such as humanitarian assistance, international humanitarian law, emerging military technologies and human rights. The series will examine the ethical implications of decisions taken at all levels, from senior policy makers to individuals at the tactical level.

This series is published under the auspices of EURO-ISME, the European Branch of the International Society for Military Ethics.

Reappraising Legal, Political and Ethical Questions Concerning the Herero and Nama Genocide

Julia Böcker

For coming to terms with massive systemic injustice, not only the historic foundations and legal questions are relevant, but also political viewpoints as well as peace ethics. The book reveals: in the face of extreme violence, even genocide, a political apology can be an effective tool for conflict transformation, even when the injustice is far in the past.

Pharmacological Enhancements in the Military

Legal and Ethical Aspects

Richard M. Heames

Human enhancement is a rapidly advancing field and the speed of advance of technology, from being available to being used, results in a delay to the ethics surrounding it. This is true of pharmacological enhancement (PCE) as much as exoskeletons and human-machine interfacing. Ethical issues arising from human enhancement include autonomy, safety and dignity.

Military Ethics and the Changing Nature of Warfare

Edited by Jean-François Caron, Nazarbayev University/
University of Opole and Marina Miron, King's College London

Military Ethics and the Changing Nature of Warfare discusses whether or not the ethical rules of warfare are keeping pace with the changing nature of human conflicts. The rapid rise in the use of automated weapons, the growing popularity of remotely controlled weapons, the development in soldiers' enhancement technologies, of hybrid warfare and the impact of gender equality are all posing tremendous moral challenges affecting the traditional warrior ethos, the justification of killing and criminal responsibility.

Agency Perception and Moral Values Related to Autonomous Weapons

Ilse Verdiesen, the Royal Netherlands Armed Forces and Delft University of Technology

The deployment of Autonomous Weapons gives rise to ongoing debate in society and at the United Nations, in the context of the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons. Yet there little empirical research has been done on this topic. This volume fills that gap by offering an empirical study based on military personnel and civilians working at the Dutch Ministry of Defence. It yields insight into how Autonomous Weapons are perceived by the military and general public; and which moral values are considered important in relation to their deployment.

Preventing Sexual Violence as a Weapon of War / Verhinderung sexueller Gewalt als Kriegswaffe / Prévenir la violence sexuelle en tant qu'arme de guerre

Samantha J. Hope, Scholar, Joint Services Command and Staff College Advanced Command and Staff Course, the Defence Academy of the United Kingdom.

In 2012, the UK introduced the ‘Preventing Sexual Violence Initiative’. This paper examines whether it is actually possible to prevent sexual violence being employed as a weapon of war against women, men and children. It assesses existing prevention strategies, uses Daesh as a case study – to illustrate the limitations of the current approaches – and considers additional measures.

Ethics in Counter-Terrorism

Edited by Professor Magdalena Badde-Revue and Professor Marie-des-Neiges Ruffo de Calabre

This book intends to discuss the ethical questions of counter-terrorism for the military, with an emphasis on its counter-terrorist role in our home countries. European armed forces have frequently had to participate in counter-terrorist operations while abroad. For many, however, counter-terrorist operations in their home country are a relatively new phenomenon. Armed and uniformed soldiers can now be seen doing work which is, in some respects, comparable to that of the civilian security forces.

Military Ethics and Leadership

Edited by Professor Peter Olsthoorn, Netherlands Defence Academy

Leadership and ethics are mostly treated as related though separate phenomena. This edited volume explicitly treats leadership and ethics as a single domain. Military leaders have to deal with personnel who have either used or experienced violence. This intertwining of leadership and violence separates military leadership from that in other professions. Even in a time that leadership is increasingly questioned, it is still good leadership that keeps soldiers from crossing the thin line between legitimate force and excessive violence.

Responsibilities to Protect

Perspectives in Theory and Practice

Edited by David Whetham and Bradley J. Strawser

Following the humanitarian horrors of the 1990s, the international community began to seek consensus on a new norm to help address the tension between upholding the sovereign right of states to administer their own internal affairs, and the pressing need for civilian populations to be protected from their own government in certain situations. The result was the responsibility to protect initiative from the UN, accepted as an emerging norm and based on existing legal structures although not itself necessarily accepted as law.
