

Guidelines for submission of edited volumes to Mnemosyne Supplements

The Mnemosyne Supplements book series (MNS) includes monographs, critical text editions, commentaries, critical bibliographies and collections of essays by various authors on closely defined themes. In principle, MNS is open to proposals for so-called 'edited volumes' or multi-authored books, but please take into consideration the following guidelines for submission. These guidelines are applicable for the first draft of the manuscript, as the outcome of the peer review process may be affected by any lack of coherence, incomplete bibliographies, lack of proper idiomatic English, etcetera.

Coherence and introduction

Brill and the editorial board of MNS share the prime concern of coherence, both in terms of spelling and style as well as content. Please note that we only accept edited volumes with either a sound theoretical and methodological framework and/or a clear thematic coherence that include an introduction outlining and explaining this framework as well as a summary of the contributions. If at all possible, please ask the authors to include cross-references to the other articles in the volume.

Content

The content of the volume should have been subject to thorough editing, so that each chapter has a natural and logical place within the whole of the manuscript.

The volume should include a Table of Contents that notes the order of the chapters.

Formal consistency

Brill does not have a single house style when it comes to referencing and citations, although we do recommend that references are submitted according to the Chicago Manual of Style, or The Oxford Style Manual (2003 edition) by Robert Ritter, published by Oxford University Press.

What is most important to us is that the style used is both clear and consistent throughout the entire volume.

Furthermore, please make sure that:

- all contributors include their own complete list of references at the end of the article. Please do not combine them into one bibliography.
- all bibliographical references are complete
- all authors use footnotes, not endnotes
- when applicable, the volume should include a list of abbreviations. Please ensure that all authors use the same uniform system.

For more information, you can view the Brill's Author Guide online or the author guidelines for the journal Mnemosyne.

Idiomatic English

It is the responsibility of contributors whose native language is not English to ensure that their text is checked by an English proof-reader for accuracy.

Again, please note that from the proposal stage onwards, poor editing - especially poor language editing - could be a reason for rejection of the entire manuscript.
