Narrative Inquiry within the Lived Experience of University Students

Series Editors: Asgar Halim Rajput, Brunel University London, UK, and Mike Watts, Brunel University London, UK

This book series aims to amplify student voices and to present a fresh, accessible and inclusive view of university experiences. The goal is to represent diverse perspectives through a wide range of contributions that explore experiences in all aspects of student life.

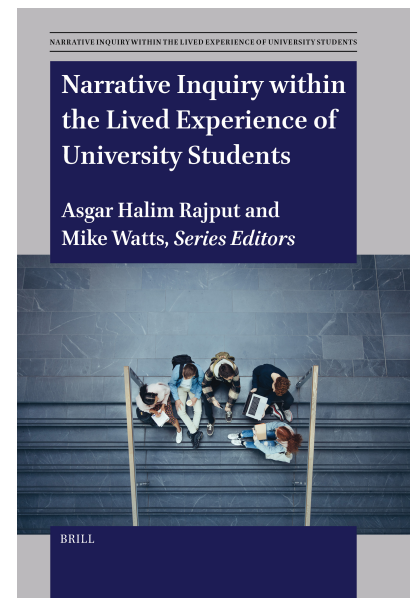

We welcome contributions from higher education students, academics or researchers worldwide. We also invite proposals for themed issues guest-edited by leading scholars in the relevant field. Possible submission topics include navigating the university life, student identity and belonging, campus involvement, gender and ethics, student-staff relationships, communication, understanding, and university cohesion.

Through this series we envision to produce inspiring literature and highlight diverse experiences and perspectives. We encourage contributors to write from their unique perspectives and shape their own stance on the matters being discussed. By stimulating such reflections, we hope readers will develop their own arguments and enhance their practices.
